The renewal came after negotiations between Thomas W. LaMont, representing the American Banking firm and Georges Robineau, governor of the Bank of France. According to the bank, the renewal was obtained simply as a precaution for the future as there is no need or intention to use the credit at present. The credit was originally extended to assist in the fight against the depreciation of the franc.

SWISS PEOPLE ARE MOST PROSPEROUS

Pond Sees Switzerland as Most Thriving Nation in Europe.

Switzerland is, at the present time, about the most prosperous country in Europe, according to Anton Pond, Janesville young man, in a letter to his aunt, the Misses Ada and Edna Pond, 12 South East street. He has been staying in Zurich, one of the principal cities of that country.

"There are no high," writes Mr. Pond, "you have to get a step ladder to reach them. It costs four good dollars to send a mail to Zurich, one of the principal cities of that country."

"The people of Switzerland," continues Mr. Pond, "seem to go in for sports quite a bit. Of course, mountain climbing equipment is in evidence in the cities. The Swiss are in the habit of carrying a lot of good motor boats in action, racing shells with obviously novice crews and somewhat more experienced onesmen according to Pond.

"Good lively music seems well patronized, particularly that brand which has been produced in the United States and which just makes your shoulders go in spite of yourself. All the cafes run afternoon and evening, and the more melodious of the music is heard in the parks. By that I mean they leave out the crash and bang of cymbals and the brass and cow bells which our dancing orchestra used so much a little while ago."

The scenery in Switzerland is most beautiful, Mr. Pond said, and the people take great pride in the beauty of their land. They are all contented and, perhaps, the most prosperous people in Europe, not being bothered by internal strife.

JUDGING CATTLE AT LANCASTER THURSDAY

Price and stock counties will compete in determining which county had the best Holsteins on Thursday during the judging at the Lancaster county fair. Jerseys and Guernseys were scheduled to be judged Thursday afternoon and Friday at Lancaster.

J. Cooper, Bloom City, Carl A. Janesville, 12 head, J. W. Lathers, Beloit, is showing his first string of Beef Shorthorns.

From Lancaster the Rock county exhibit will be shipped to Barbours and a week later to Milwaukee for a week's post before the National Dairy show. Around 40 head, including the Milking Shorthorns, will be shipped to Janesville to be dispersed before the National.

Criminal Cases Up in Elkhorn

Elkhorn—With Rescue Lane sitting on the bench as county judge of Washburn county, steps are expected to be taken in the near future to dispose of the numerous criminal cases that have piled up since the county has been without a magistrate to hear them.

Four persons are in the county jail, six of whom are held for trials on charges of forgery, automobile theft and liquor law violations. Fifteen persons are out on bail, mostly on liquor charges awaiting trial.

Sheriff Wylie said Wednesday he did not believe the county judge would be able to hold court until next week, on his first day as county judge, Judge Lane was busy with civil cases. Friday he is expected to dispose of the cases of the four children of Mrs. Allen Stacker of Allen's Grove. The woman is under arrest on a statutory charge and the children will be committed to Sparta.

TANKS MAY JOIN IN DEFENSE DAY BUT NOT AS A UNIT

The statement was made by Capt. Dorie Grimes, head of the 22nd Division Tank Corps. Thus far, no arrangements have been made calling for a military display here on National Defense day, which is Friday.

Life Imprisonment, Parole or Paydon

Illinois has repeated its law making death the sentence for murder in its most heinous form. True, the legislature has not acted but the result will be quite the same. The state of Len Small and Herlin, has joined Wisconsin in establishing life imprisonment as the ultimate in punishment for capital crimes. Illinois also has a governor who passes out pardons with about the same well-oiled complacency as our governor in Wisconsin. It is not for the pardon and the parole, the public would be satisfied with the judgment of the court in sentencing Leeb and Leopold to an eternity of isolation.

Down deep in the human soul, when we get away from the cry of revenge, comes a feeling that imprisonment for life must be far greater punishment to the criminal than death, immediate and sudden. But—and there is the rub. It was sensed by the judge and made a part of his statement—there are the parole and the pardon. No official should have the right to pardon except for one, and only one reason—innocence under the law—proved innocence and legal evidence to establish it.

Pardon, which, like kissing, goes by favor, arouses resentment, incites suspicion, invites contempt for government and governors and ironical and sneering remarks about judges and courts. Parole is not for such as Leeb and Leopold. They may well have never been tried at all. Paroled, they will be as dangerous as they were before with their revolt against all accepted conventions of decency and honor and civilization. Sociological biologists as they are, they will laugh at justice and despise the governor who paroled or pardons them.

Out of 146 murders in Chicago there has been one execution in the last year. Illinois has capital punishment for first degree murder. Yet 116 murders have been committed and one person has paid the extreme penalty. The fact must be impressed upon the civilian mind that justice hesitates to send men to the electric chair or the gallows. We have a far greater percentage of convictions in Wisconsin than that. Justice will send men to life imprisonment but halt at being responsible for death. Perhaps we should have a greater amount of attention given to some of these things and take cognizance of the real danger in the administration of justice.

There is much criticism of courts when the pardon power, our ally sentimentally expressed in paroling dangerous enemies of society, and laws too rigid and too easily evaded, are contributions to the greater percentage of judicial disturbance.

Schools and Horse Races—Rivals

It may well be noted that the school exhibit at the Jefferson fair, as the correspondent puts it, is the rival of the races in interest. Which reminds one who has visited several fairs this year, that the school has occupied a most important place in the exhibits made at these centralized points for the mobilization of evidence of what we are doing in the schools. Here we have concrete examples, not mere theory, in exhibits. Here we have the work of hands as well as work of the head. No wonder the parents are as much interested in these exhibits as they are in the horse races. We might get along without the races but we would have a hard time getting on without the schools.

The Fading Landmarks

Yes, we are growing old as a state. Every little while we hear of some old landmark passing from sight and a sigh is all that we can give. "Way back when" the state was still young, only 20 years old, in 1868, the Palmer House in Fond du Lac was built and opened to the public. Now it has been sold to be demolished and a modern building will take its place. In those days men built hotels for hospitable entertainment of guests. Rooms were large, light and airy and the furniture was designed and arranged to appear something like home. They were more than cells arranged in tiers with just enough room to take off the shoes and hang a hat on the clothes pole. We had one here in Janesville, the Hyatt House, large beyond its possible patronage, elaborate beyond its need. But it was a hotel and a home and great was the advertising that it gave to Janesville. It was in the days of the ill-fated Newhall House in Milwaukee, and a score or more of large, lavishing hostels with landlords who knew every guest by name and how his family was getting on. The legal elder rider was saying his last farewell to these great piles of lumber and brick, rose in every growing city and people were proud of the hospitality which they accorded and invited. Gone are they with the sea going back, the too busy and the American plan means.

CONDITIONS IN PERSIA

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Washington—The swift action of the American government in demanding reparation for the death of Major Imbrie, who was killed in Teheran by a mob of religious fanatics, will doubtless make Persia quite safe for Americans from now on.

Such is the belief of an American business man, recently returned to Washington from Teheran, where he resided for a number of years while studying Persia's commercial possibilities. "Persia is a rather risky country for foreigners, these days," he said, after being assured that his name would not be published. "Like China, it is full of wandering bands of demoralized soldiers, who have taken to the road in order to earn a livelihood. Sometimes they descend upon the villages and make things very lively indeed. The situation is especially bad because the central government is apparently unable to control it. There is, too, unquestionably a large amount of religious intolerance, only natural in a country whose social and political life is still chiefly influenced by the Mohammedan faith."

"Americans have probably enjoyed a greater immunity from danger than most nationalities, because the Persians are generally friendly toward us. We are not suspected of harboring designs on large slices of Persian territory, as are several European nations. We are great buyers of Persian rugs. And in Teheran there is a high esteem for American science. Yet, Americans are not so safe in Persia that they do not welcome an effective demonstration of their country's protective power."

Because of its geographical isolation from modern trade routes, and because of its supposed lack of mineral resources, Persia has been able to remain largely aloof from that contact with western civilization that is gradually changing other oriental countries. Russia's occasional advances from the north have been checked to a great extent by Great Britain's threats from the south, and vice versa. On the whole, the country has been less exploited than certain remote parts of Africa, while tourists have left it almost completely alone.

Without a railroad of any significance; without modern asphalt highways and without navigable rivers; depending on the horse, mule, camel and donkey for its chief means of transportation, Persia has pursued its agricultural life, undisturbed, by the swift pace of twentieth century machinery.

"Except for a few American rug factories, foreign capitalists have made little attempt to introduce western industries. During the war, the Russians attempted to mine coal in the northern provinces, but the venture was abandoned and the mining machinery left on the site was either destroyed or stolen. The British, it is true, have had more success in drilling for oil, but they are still handicapped by lack of transportation facilities."

A large section of the Persian population still lives a nomadic existence, leading the herds of sheep from one section to another in search of suitable pasture. An almost equal large number live as henchmen of a few powerful families. In some places the feudal system reigns complete, whole villages being owned by an overlord who must be consulted in every act—even in the marriages of the village maidens.

A census of the population has never been taken in Persia, owing partly to the nomadic character of the people and partly to their fear that such a step would mean an increase in taxes. Various estimates have been made, based on the assumption that the country once contained vast numbers who were decimated by repeated invasions as well as disease and pestilence. According to the latest study, however, it is declared that the country could not at any time have supported more than 15,000,000.

Consisting of the western part of that tableland which separates Mesopotamia from the plains of northern India, Persia is bounded on the east by Afghanistan and British Baluchistan, on the west by Mesopotamia; on the north by the Caucasus, the Caspian Sea and Turkestan, and on the south and southwest by the Arabian Sea and the Persian Gulf.

It is slightly larger than the combined area of France, Spain, Germany and Belgium—mostly a high plateau, from 2,000 to 6,000 feet above sea level, broken only rarely by small rivers but frequently by mountain ranges. There are also a few strips of low coastal land along the Persian Gulf and the Caspian, and a narrow strip of fertile land along the coast of the Persian Gulf, which is a great handicap to the cultivation of the soil, which must be largely artificially irrigated.

The Persian system of irrigation is probably unique. They sink a well at the foot of a mountain and water is struck. A channel is then driven, and additional wells are sunk every 20 or 30 yards along the line. By this laborious and costly means water is conveyed for long distances—sometimes for 10 or 15 miles. These lines of well-heads, stretching forth into the distance, are conspicuous features of the Persian landscape, which is otherwise singularly barren. Trees and wild vegetation are, of course, extremely scarce throughout the country. Consequently, the one or two shade trees in the Persian's garden are carefully tended and counted among his most priceless assets.

Lying as it does between western and central Asia, Persia has always been buffeted by the storm of invaders sweeping toward the west. Again and again it has suffered the pain of conquest. Again and again its buildings of sun-dried brick have been dashed to pieces; its irrigation works destroyed; its crops devastated. But, fortunately, nature installed the Persian a passion for building, so that always he has patiently set to work to build again. As a result of this violent history, however, very few of the buildings standing today possess the romantic touch of age. Thus, tourists find Persia disappointing.

On Monday the New York Times published a headline, "Republicans Fear Outcome in Maine. Leaders in Washington Expect Close Vote with Possible Loss of Governor." But as Nat Goodwin once sang, "Oh, What a Difference in the Morning."

Mr. Davis can mark Maine right off the list.

The Boston Transcript asks: "Is this American or European?" Well, it may depend upon which presidential campaign headquarters one is in, for an answer.

Now we come to the main election.

Quiet reigns in the Herrin sector.

AUGUST MOON

The moon comes up on schedule time,
In ages yet to be.
The self-same curve of sky she'll climb
For other eyes to see.

At nine o'clock some lovely night
Ten thousand years away
She'll spill the same flood of light
Across the rippling bay.

Some other August, when we're gone
The moonlight moon will rise
And shed her mellow light upon
The foolish and the wise.

And some will see the lady fair
And some will find the man
As Eve and Adam found them there
When first the world began.

And each shall dream as now we dream
And wonder where we went
And live and love and work and scheme
Marry, grow old and die.

But still on every August night
That God permits to be,
At nine o'clock, this flood of light
Who follows them shall see.

Nor ever late, nor ever soon,
But promptly to the time,
This self-same lovely August moon
The self-same sky will climb.

HOROSCOPE

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1924.

Threatening stars rule today, according to astrology. Saturn and Jupiter are both in malignant aspect.

Clashes between capital and labor are again strongly indicated, but labor is to be fortunate in gaining points.

Power for a leader of organized industry and great growth of financial power among workers are forecast.

It has been often told that in this new era old things are passing away and for that reason whatever is reactionary can exist but a few years.

This prophecy of progress appears to indicate that in politics conservatism might win for a time, but only for a brief period.

Again a royal betrothal is foretold for England, but it may not be the Prince of Wales.

The position of the House of Commons, as denoting turmoil in the House of Commons, radicals and socialists probably causing trouble.

At this time the United States probably will strongly reflect whatever happens in Great Britain.

Serious earthquakes are prophesied for Italy and American tourists may suffer death in one of them.

Revolutionary indications may disturb Russian international relations at this time.

Education is well directed and colleges should benefit especially from the rule of the stars.

Persons who believe in the value of new enterprises in the coming year, the year may be disturbing, especially to those of sentimental proclivities.

Children born on this day may meet with many unusual experiences in life. Children should choose wisely when they marry, because divorces are common among these subjects of Virgo.

LABOR AND LA FOLLETTE

By this time, it is thoroughly understood that the independence of La Follette is not the independence of the American Federation of Labor has no weight whatever with individual members of organized labor. If any member of a union votes for La Follette, he will do so because he himself thinks La Follette would make a better president than Davis or Coolidge—not because the executive council of the federation has attempted to deliver his vote.

But any union that organized labor should vote for La Follette is a matter of explanation. Suppose La Follette were elected, and suppose he became a dictator over congress, what possible benefit would the laboring man derive from this election and dictatorship? It would be possible for La Follette to bring about the enactment of radical laws, some of which might bring artificial aid to the large farmers of the middle west and west; but in the end all the lines of policy would be subordinated to the laws of the Federal economy.

THE RETURN OF SUSPENDERS

My 12 year old boy, writes a mother, insists on wearing a belt and wears it too tight, I believe, although he says not. Should he wear suspenders? (Mrs. H. M.)

Is it harmful for a man to wear a belt? writes a person of indeterminate gender—using the noncommittal form of signature chiefly affected by old maids nowadays. Is it harmful for a man to wear the ordinary men's garters around the leg below the knee? Is the slight constriction sufficient to cause varicose veins? (R. L. J.)

Suspenders are coming back. I wish I could say the same of extension ladders and a few other things the neighbors have borrowed. But suspenders are positively in evidence again since they sprang the new sloppily English crozier this is. No longer can a man hang his nether garments on his hips as of yore. The waist line of these new fangled things comes close up under the armpits, so a fellow can't rely implicitly on a belt to hold 'em up. He simply has to get equipped with suspenders. And the best evidence of the renewed interest in the old-time calm and untroubled serenity of the clerk when you announce that you are in quest of a pair. He has 'em. He has 'em in styles to please the most fastidious.

Frankly, I am a prejudiced witness, but it is my belief that belts have contributed considerably to the proclivities of posture, the slump, which affects the carriage and secondarily the moral fiber of so many men. The belt encouraged the stooped and the hunched back, slumping. A trusty pair of suspenders, with all buttons securely attached and functioning, places the man's shoulders and back in a tendency to make him hold himself erect if he has a spark of vigor or ambition in him.

What is saying of suspenders may apply as well to women. The weight of a woman's skirt or slacks should be supported from her shoulders, not from her waist or hips. She should wear a corset or girdle, upon a kind of skeleton waist, which is practically a modified suspender. The present fashion in women's slacks is in clothing. If we add support and tend to make the old waist or hip support obsolete.

Since we human beings are prone to our kind feel the natural supports of our bodies, we should be careful to harden our back to cope with the pull of gravity, without adding the burden of the weight, say, of a skirt or slacks. If we are able to hold on all fours, it wouldn't matter much whether we wore belts or suspenders.

On the question of the boy, I don't think mother need worry about how light his belt is. But as soon as winter comes with heavily clothing—the boy has to wear a heavy belt, self up in suspenders again. The girls won't see 'em then. At 12 it is a matter of the gravest importance what the girls may think of what a boy is wearing.

If garters are to be worn at all, they should be side clasps for girls or women, taking support from the skeleton suspender which I have referred to. For men such garters as my correspondent mentions, but never less than an inch wide, preferably wider, so that they will function when quite loosely attached about the leg. Narrow or tight garters around the leg below or above the knee do constrict return veins and tend to cause varicose enlargement. Young boys should wear socks or gaiters, which require no support.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.
I would like to ask your advice, I am afflicted with a skin trouble, and I have tried everything I can find. I have used a lot of ointments, but they all tell me they cannot guarantee a cure for my trouble. Have you any advice or treatment? (Miss C. L. 12)

Answer—advise you to select one of the best skin ointments, such as skin trouble by whatever means best for your particular case, which is that you should use a good treatment. Honest physicians never tend to guarantee the cure.

What is the name of a very good kidney medicine, which is such thing as sleeping powder? If so, name one of the best. (J. P. 13)

Answer—Water is a very good kidney medicine—a lot better than most of the nostrums which purport to be "good for kidney trouble." Many drugs in powder form induce sleep. I should not advise you to trifle with such drugs. Send a stamped self addressed envelope for advice about insomnia.

Morning Torture.
Is a cold bath before breakfast really a health advantage? Is it a health disadvantage? What is the proper temperature of the water for such a bath? (W. H. 14)

Answer—For vigorous young folk a morning cold bath is good discipline. It helps to awaken the system, and it is a health advantage. Let it be as cold as the house affords, and the colder the shorter the bath. It is doubtful whether the morning cold bath is worth while if one lives in an overheated room and wears out the body by the end of the day. Personally, I've never been enthusiastic about taking baths—either morning or evening. I have been enthusiastic about taking a cold shower at 7 o'clock. But on the whole, the punishment is deemed healthful—perhaps more so than a hot shower. I think the time might better be devoted to some exercises, or even a few somersaults, taken in the altogether or birthday costume.

Q. How many people are there in the United States between the ages of 65 and 100? (R. F. 15)

A. In the 1920 census the age distribution was: 65 to 69, 1,070,817; 70 to 74, 795,361; 75 to 79, 415,945; 80 to 84, 185,993; 85 to 89, 89,272; 90 to 94, 16,383; 95 to 99, 3,569; 100, 1,501; 95,575 ages unknown.

Q. What kind of a government has Sum, and what position has President Wilson's son-in-law there? (R. H. 16)

A. Sum is a kingdom and is now under the rule of Rama VI. Francis Sayre is an advisor on foreign affairs to the Siamese government.

Q. What are the chances of an individual's being killed by lightning? (A. T. D. 17)

A. In the last year for which statistics are available, 425 persons were killed by lightning in the United States as compared with 1,628,832 deaths from other sources. It is figured that the individual person is far more likely to be killed in a railroad wreck or by an automobile, to drown, or even to be murdered, than he is to die by lightning.

Q. In Marvel waxing, how wide should the waves be? (H. H. 18)

A. "The American Hairdresser" says that the proper width of a wave is one inch in diameter. In order to obtain this, a fold is formed on a straight strand of hair about every 15 inches.

Q. Why do some peaches that have been canned lose the peach flavor? (R. A. 19)

A. "The Canning Trade" says that uncontrollable factors may be responsible for small part of this loss of flavor. In several years of practical experiment and observation of modern canning methods has established the belief that there is but one canning practice responsible for this loss of the true peach flavor, and that is live peeling.
